Leading and Building the Entrepreneurial University

Prof. Paul Coyle
Innovation, Leadership and Change Management Consultant (UK)

What are the characteristics that define a university as being entrepreneurial? Can universities use these definitions as a guide to becoming more entrepreneurial? What is the gap between aspiration and reality? Which characteristics are achievable, aspirational or mere rhetoric? What is the role of a leader in an entrepreneurial institution?

Paul Coyle will facilitate a practical workshop to explore these important questions. He will draw on a range of international case studies and identify the key actions needed to lead and build an entrepreneurial university or vocational education institution.

Since 2013, Paul has been working as an independent consultant, whilst also fulfilling ongoing roles for the European Commission’s Directorate General responsible for Culture and Education, the UK’s Leadership Foundation for Higher Education, the UK’s National Centre for Entrepreneurship in Education and the European University Industry Innovation Network.

Previously, Paul worked as a member of university executive teams, leading organisational & cultural change and contributing to mergers that established three new universities in the UK. During an academic career spanning nearly 30 years, he held a wide range of responsibilities including the posts of Pro Vice-Chancellor for Learning & Teaching and Executive Dean for Arts & Business.

Friday
11 March 2016
2:00pm - 4:00pm

LAB-14, Seminar Room
Carlton Connect Initiative
700 Swanston Street
Carlton

REGISTER HERE

Presented by the LH Martin Institute for Tertiary Education Leadership and Management in collaboration with the University of Melbourne EU Centre on Shared Complex Challenges.